The price of freedom is visible at any VA hospital

Militaryconnection.com should be the first place you visit when preparing to transition from the military to civilian life, or if you are an employer searching for candidates/employees with military work ethics and integrity. Listings for government, federal, military and civilian employment opportunities are just some of the resources of value. The web site is chock full of informative, timely and thought provoking information, and I am amazed at the amount of resources available for active duty military, veterans, retirees, wounded warriors, spouses and families.

The web site is constantly changing and adapting to the needs, wants and desires of their users, and is of great assistance to job seekers by offering writing tips and articles to guide you to the best career or educational path possible.

This company is one of the best "for profit" companies with a non profit heart that I have been privileged to work with. Debbie Gregory and her staff are compassionate and caring, giving of their time, energy and resources in support of our military, and I highly recommend this web site to our servicemembers and their families.

Debbie and her staff always are open to ideas that will create and build community, and are attentive to the changing and diverse needs of our servicemembers, veterans, families and loved ones.

It is also a great pleasure to congratulate them on becoming a Corporate Sponsor of America Supports You, an honor that few have attained. It is through hard work, integrity, perseverance, fortitude and a compassionate heart that this commendation has been earned.
